

YOU ARE NEEDED

More Needs, Fewer Resources

Charities urgently need your support through the COMBINED FEDERAL CAMPAIGN, or by making a DIRECT GIFT

Why did giving decline so much last year?

With so many disasters, how to respond?

You Are Needed

More Needs, Fewer Resources

Major earthquakes in Turkey, Morocco and Afghanistan.

Wildfires in Maui and Greece. A devastating flood in Libya.

A humanitarian crisis in the Horn of Africa, one of many around the world.

An increase in hunger here in the nation's capital.

It's not hard to see the growing needs. Unfortunately, giving by individuals plummeted 13.4% last year. Ten percent fewer people made donations.

When individuals give less, all charities struggle because two thirds of their support comes from individuals.

Your gift matters. Your donation may not seem like it will make a difference for charities, but it does. Even small gifts from average donors add up to big impacts: people fed, the homeless housed, animals saved, nature preserved, cures discovered, rights protected.

accountability standards, such as an annual audit. You can focus on which charities you want to support, choosing to help several charities with one pledge.

To help, this guide explains the missions of dozens of CFC charities. You can learn much more about these charities at CharityChoices.com, where each charity answers a series of questions, such as "Why should I support your charity's work?"

If you can't give through the CFC, you can also join other donors by supporting a charity directly through its website. Most charities allow you to make an automatic monthly donation. That's how you can make your donation really add up.

You can give directly to each charity in this guide by going to CharityChoices.com. Click on "All Charities A to Z," click on the charity you want to support, then click "Give Online Now." All your donation goes to the charity.

Whichever charities you choose to support, please give as generously as you can: your gift is needed!

Your gift plus the gifts of thousands of other donors is what makes the COMBINED FEDERAL CAMPAIGN such a great way to support charities.

Your gift really adds up through the CFC because most people have a little deducted from each paycheck. This helps charities all year long.

And by giving through the CFC at GiveCFC.org, you know that the charities you support have all met

WHY IS GIVING DOWN?

Giving by individuals had its biggest drop ever last year, down 13.4%. Why?

Part of it is inflation. Total giving by individuals — $319 billion in 2022 — was only down 6.4%. But when you adjust that figure for inflation, you get the 13.4% decline. Inflation no doubt caused many people to cut back on their giving.

Part of it is fewer donors: 10% fewer people made donations in 2022 than in 2021. In 2002, 68% of households made donations. By 2018, less than 50% did so.

Part of it is the boom in giving during the pandemic. In 2020, giving went up 8.1%, the largest increase in giving since 2012. As the pandemic eased, so did giving.

Overall giving to charities — which includes foundation and corporate giving — was just shy of $500 billion, down from $558 billion in 2021.

"They brought me to a place in my life that I never knew existed."

—Richard Smith

"I had a grenade go off...took my hand off instantly," recalls Richard Smith, an Army veteran. "I got gangrene in my leg." As a double amputee, life for Smith and his wife became very challenging.

What's made it easier is his service dog, Eli. "When I drop something, Eli picks it up. When I have problems because of a pinched nerve, my wife can put a harness on Eli and he will pull me up out of the chair. When I don't get out of bed at my normal time, Eli checks on me and nudges me. Eli has become very protective of me."

Smith says his relationship with Eli changed his life. "I can't tell you how much I appreciate Working Dogs For Vets for hooking me up with a great friend."

"The connection between a veteran and their service dog is invaluable," explains Kenneth Knabenshue, founder of Working Dogs for Vets (CFC #37322). He says some veterans feel as though they have lost their purpose after leaving the military. "They feel they're not needed." But, he adds, training a service dog can transform their lives.

Disabled veterans can suffer from a range of ailments, disabilities or trauma, both visible and invisible, Knabenshue says. "They are desperately searching for help. Many consider suicide because they feel like they are a burden to their family, friends and society."

Knabenshue never envisioned Working Dogs for Vets would become an organization. He just wanted to help as many veterans and shelter dogs as possible. But when he learned how much a typical service dog could cost—now $25,000 to $50,000—he knew that's unattainable for most vets.

In response, he formed Working Dogs in 2015, with the help of volunteers, all of whom were committed to helping veterans get service dogs.

Its No Veteran Left Behind program, which involves teaching veterans how to train their own service dogs, has taken off. Knabenshue says that requests for service dogs have doubled every year.

To help meet this need, Working Dogs has developed a "pay forward" plan, with veterans agreeing to help other vets train his or her own service dogs. Through this process, Army veteran Smith says, veterans like him make new friends. "We have great comradery."

Today there are more than 3,000 teams across the country, with 98% of the dogs being rescued from shelters. Working Dogs (WorkingDogsForVets.org) strives to meet two challenges: saving the lives of both veterans and shelter dogs.

As the charity's motto puts it: "Saving lives at both ends of the leash!"

"I quote figures and percentages. But behind those figures are real faces."

—Liesbeth Aelbrecht, WHO

The figures for South Sudan are staggering: more than two thirds of the country's 12.5 million people suffer from acute hunger, according to a recent World Health Organization report. More than 150,000 children have been treated for severe malnutrition so far this year. It is one of the most severe but underreported humanitarian crises in the world.

The numbers are shocking, but the haunted faces are what motivates World Emergency Relief's CEO, Kristy Scott, to work tirelessly to deliver critical food aid to those in desperate need. "It's such a sad situation," Scott says. "People are going for days with nothing to eat. When you look into their eyes, you see desperation. We cannot stand idly by while children are suffering."

World Emergency Relief (CFC #10984) plays a crucial role in South Sudan, shipping millions of lifesaving, vitamin-fortified rice meals every year. The charity aims to tackle the heart-wrenching scenes of hunger and despair witnessed in South Sudan.

WER's food shipments are critical in this severely underfunded region of the world. The problem is made worse by record levels of hunger worldwide, plus the dangerous conditions faced by refugees and aid workers in war-torn countries.

This is where WER's long-time relationships on the ground are so important. By providing food, medical and cash resources directly to its partners in the field, WER delivers quality, culturally appropriate aid while keeping its overhead low — just 2.4% last year.

The children are what keeps Scott going. Emmanuel, an 8-year-old refugee who was paralyzed at birth from a brain injury, is one of these children. He and his six siblings were severely malnourished when WER stepped in to provide lifesaving nutritional support.

Unfortunately, stories of suffering like Emmanuel's are all too common. Millions fled to Sudan to escape violence, only to return when its brutal civil war erupted again last April.

South Sudan continues to grapple with ongoing conflict and instability, worsening the already challenging issue of food scarcity. Four straight years of record rains have caused catastrophic flooding across much of the country, destroying crops and displacing countless more people. South Sudan is one of the top ten most vulnerable countries to the impacts of climate change.

Even in the most trying times, Autism Speaks advocates for military families like Sophia and Alivia's family

Revered political leader and activist Nelson Mandela once said: "The greatest glory in living lies not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall."

For Sarah, wife of an a United States Air Force Chaplain and mother of two girls with autism, no quote could better describe her family's journey over the last 13 years. It was only through their strong values that her family was able to withstand setbacks that would bring most to their knees.

Although their autism affects them differently, sisters Alivia, 13, and Sophia, 8, share similar stories of overcoming adversity to reach milestones that many specialists never thought they would.

"Sophia has faced challenges and obstacles from birth but has continued to overcome," Sarah explains. "She was unable to walk and barely able to eat until her second birthday. She didn't say her first word (mamma) until she was four.

"But with two years of intense early intervention and full-time ABA therapy in a clinical setting, Sophia's vocabulary is amazing, she has friends, loves ballet and even plays soccer!" (ABA is a therapy based on the science of learning and behavior.)

"Alivia had a neonatal stroke, which caused her to have many medical issues throughout childhood. At first, her autism was masked by her medical condition, but she was diagnosed around her second birthday. She didn't speak until she was six, but now talks and reads thanks to intense therapies."

Sarah's husband, Tamer, is an active duty service member. His career has caused his family to move several times over the years, but she says the military has gone above and beyond to make sure her girls have everything they need to thrive no matter where they're stationed.

"All branches of the military have a designated program for special needs families. Among many other services, we receive 40 hours a month of respite care and in-home ABA therapy for both girls. We are proud to be a part of the military family."

Even in the most trying times, Autism Speaks (CFC #12413) continues to advocate for families like Sarah and

"With two years of intense early intervention and full-time ABA therapy in a clinical setting, Sophia's vocabulary is amazing, she has friends, loves ballet and even plays soccer!"

Tamer's to provide vital resources, round-the-clock support and hope for the entire autism community.

It is dedicated to promoting solutions for the needs of all individuals with autism and their families.

JDRF International

We're fighting for a world without Type 1 Diabetes

JDRF leads the fight against type 1 diabetes (T1D) by funding research, advocating for policies that accelerate access to new therapies, and providing a support network for millions of people around the world impacted by T1D. We collaborate with academic institutions, policymakers, and corporate and industry partners to develop and deliver a pipeline of innovative therapies to people living with T1D and ultimately, find cures. Please help us accelerate progress toward curing, preventing, and better treating T1D and its complications.

The Children's Inn at NIH

"A Place Like Home"

The Children's Inn is a place families can stay as their sick child participates in pediatric research at the National Institutes of Health. Our donors provide housing and supportive services, like nightly dinners, at no cost to families.

With your support, we are making childhood possible for the over 1,700 children who stay at The Inn each year, as they search for answers to their tough, and sometimes rare, medical conditions.

Support Our Aging Religious – SOAR!

*They were there for us.
Now it's our turn to give.*

Sisters, Brothers and religious order Priests—who have given their lives to the Church and its work—are facing a crisis. Many worked for only modest stipends. As their median age rises, their communities have little for retirement. Healthcare costs have soared. In response, SOAR! awards grants to congregations of Catholic Sisters, Brothers and Priests to care for their retired members. Your donation addresses their immediate needs and ensures their safety, comfort and dignity. Please help.

Chesapeake Bay Foundation

Save the Bay!

The Chesapeake Bay Foundation works with community partners, governments, and people like you to create a healthy environment for the more than 18 million people living in the Chesapeake Bay watershed. We're making progress toward that goal, but there's a lot of work left to do. You can help us get there. You can help save the Bay. Gifts in any amount can and do make a difference.

Cancer Prevention and Treatment Fund

We're here for you with hope and help

We conduct research that helps kids and adults prevent cancer and choose the best treatments. We are fighting to lower the outrageous prices for cancer drugs, because everyone deserves affordable treatments that work. You can trust us because we don't accept donations from companies that sell cancer treatments. 100% of your donation goes to research and to help prevent and treat cancer, 0% for flashy fundraising. Farmers and Hunters Feeding the Hungry

"For I was hungry, and you gave me meat."

For food banks, one of the most needed but expensive items is meat. We help fill this need across the nation by getting farmers and hunters to donate deer, elk and livestock, paying local butchers to process the meat, and giving it to food banks, homeless shelters and soup kitchens for distribution.

One deer can provide 160 meals. Since 1997, we have provided more than 22.5 million meals, helping combat hunger locally and sustainably.

National Association of American Veterans

Serving Veterans with Honor and Respect

America has left Afghanistan and Iraq, but these countries will never leave many veterans who fought there. More than two in five have a disability. One in five struggles with PTSD or major depression. Many more veterans commit suicide than are killed in action (893 vs. 37 in 2016). NAAV's volunteers provide basic help to these veterans: someone to talk to, help when rent or a utility bill is overdue, help navigating the VA bureaucracy. With an overhead of just 1.8%, your support goes directly to help vets and their families.

How to respond to a crisis

Many people who are moved by the human cost of a major disaster such as the fires in Maui want to help. Here are ideas to help you make sure your help is effective.

Think before you give. With today's technology, it's easy to make a quick gift. But the best way to respond to a disaster is a little like responding to an emergency: often it's better to think before you act. Think about how you can best respond.

One problem with making a quick donation is that it often goes to one charity, the Red Cross. One way to find other charities is CharityNavigator.org, which quickly publishes a list of highly rated charities that are responding to specific disasters.

Give money if you can. Money allows charities working on the ground to buy the supplies they need to meet the often quickly changing needs of those affected. Physical donations must be sorted, transported, stored and distributed.

Give locally. One problem with giving to national and international charities is that some don't set up separate funds for specific disasters. Your donation may simply support the charity's overall disaster response capacity. An alternative is to support local charities or funds that are set up to respond to a specific disaster, often by local charities such as the United Way or a community foundation.

Give to meet both short and long-term needs. When a disaster happens, the immediate needs are overwhelming: for rescue, food, shelter. But the harm is long-term: individuals need to heal. Families and communities need to rebuild. This takes resources over time, often years. This is why giving to a local fund often makes sense.

Give to prevent the next disaster. In every state and most countries, charities are working to prevent or mitigate the next disaster, often by protecting the local environment or fighting climate change.
