How charities are responding to the pandemic

Nearly every charity in the country has been affected by the pandemic, even if they're not directly responding to it. Just in the past six months, nearly a million nonprofit jobs were lost, according to a recent report.

At the same time, many charities are facing an unprecedented need for their services. The demands on Food Banks have gotten a lot of attention. But many other types of charities are also having to find ways to respond to the pandemic's impact on the people they help.

In the DC area, for example, the Arlington Free Clinic (CFC #86926) says that many of the patients it serves "have already lost their jobs in construction, restaurants, cleaning and childcare and are struggling with access to food, transportation and other emergency needs.

“Like the rest of the country, covid-19 turned AFC’s world upside down, but unlike most places, we can’t shut down.”

Here are how several Combined Federal Campaign charities are responding to the pandemic.

You can support these and many other charities by going to GiveCFC.org.

Here are a few of the trustworthy charities you can support through the Combined Federal Campaign:

A threat to poor communities around the world

Nearly every poor community in the world is struggling to get through the pandemic. Children's Food Fund/World Emergency Relief (CFC #10984) has shipped four million pounds of disaster relief to communities it supports in Africa and Asia as well as Native American communities in the U.S.

Helping keep people and their pets together during the pandemic

The Humane Society of the U.S. (CFC #11984) launched the COVID-19 Relief Fund to support animal shelters, rescue groups and other organizations that are responding to the economic impacts of the COVID-19 outbreak. Its goal is to keep people and their pets together during this crisis.

Contributions provide veterinary care, pet food, horse feed and animal care supplies, as well as other costs related to caring for animals during the outbreak.

Together We Respond

The number of families facing extreme food insecurity in the countries we serve is on the rise because of COVID-19. Since mid-March, and because of generous donors like you, Food For The Poor (CFC #10328) has shipped 709 tractor-trailer loads of aid, including 200 containers specifically for COVID-19 relief. Without you, we cannot continue this fight.

Sharing hope through Bible translation

The hope found in the Bible is needed now more than ever. Yet 2,000 languages still lack it. Wycliffe Bible Translators (CFC #11737) is an international Christian ministry that translates Scripture and teaches literacy, bringing life transformation to communities worldwide.

Stop Cancer Before It Starts!

The Prevent Cancer Foundation® (CFC #11074) is the only U.S. nonprofit solely dedicated to cancer prevention and early detection. We dare to imagine a world where no one dies of cancer. Since day one, we have been a pioneer in cancer prevention and early detection to increase the chance of successful outcomes.

The watchdog of the breast cancer movement

By refusing to take funding from any company or organization that profits from or contributes to breast cancer, Breast Cancer Action (CFC #12010) acts as a watchdog. It educates, organizes and takes action for systemic change to ensure that fewer women develop and die from breast cancer.
